Trivia quiz: Moms in TV Land

In January 1953, Lucy Ricardo gave birth to Little Ricky on “I Love Lucy,” a show that had the highest number and percentage of viewers of any show until that time. But after she gave birth, most people don’t remember specific episodes that featured Lucy as a mother.

Following is a quiz of TV stars whose motherly role was more central to their character.

Trivia quiz: Dads in TV Land

In the 1950s, TV fathers were often portrayed as the pillar of the family as in “Father Knows Best,” where Robert Young played insurance agent Jim Anderson, who came home every evening to solve the minor crises in his children’s lives. Over time, fathers tended to develop flaws. There was the bigoted Archie Bunker played by Carroll O’Conner in the 1970s, and the accident-prone Tim Taylor (played by Tim Allen) in “Home Improvement” from the 1990s, for example.

Trivia quiz: Single Dads in TV Land

In the 1950s TV sitcom “Ozzie and Harriet,” Ozzie never seemed to leave home except to buy ice cream, and his occupation was a mystery. But many of the fathers in the sitcoms of the 1950s and 60s had substantial careers, AND they were single parents, raising children on their own or with the aid of a supporting female such as Aunt Bea on the “Andy Griffith Show.” However, this plot device was often less to indicate their competency as fathers and more about giving them a chance to date. Can you identify their careers?
