Flightless Birds and Flower Fun

If you should happen to dream about penguins generally, according to this website, it's a reminder to remain calm and cool in stressful situations, but dreaming about a penguin approaching you is really good news. It indicates "that you will meet someone who has a fun-loving character and is very joyful to deal with."

That little tidbit is an example of the quirky content of Wiser Now Wednesday, a free, lighthearted weekly, online, downloadable newsletter. It provides instant programs for teachers and activity professionals and mind stimulating fun for all. Grandparents use it with grandchildren, family care partners use it with their loved ones, and home health caregivers use it to engage their clients. Loosely following Chase's Calendar of Events, which is indispensable to activity professionals, each week offers facts, quotes, observations, a trivia quiz, and resources covering an eclectic range of topics from duct tape to dreaming of those penguins, from fun foods to funny TV, animals to artists, and much more. Written in the cheerful style Wiser Now CEO (Chief Enthusiasm Officer) Kathy Laurenhue is known for, it uncovers the unusual each Wednesday, and is always family-friendly.

Wiser Now Wednesday is also customizable. If an organization just wants a trivia quiz or fun facts, for example, or wants their own name displayed on the publication, all that's possible. You can see the entire archive of past issues here:

And if you are interested in flora rather than fauna, you might check out a Wiser Now Wednesday spring offering which highlights the Laughing Bee Orchid, among other flowers.
